

Omar Mejía Castelazo (CV)

Omar Mejía has a Bachelor's degree in Economics with a major in monetary and financial economics from the School of Economics of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM).

He has 20 years of experience in monetary policy analysis, in financial administration, public finance and banking, government treasury, as well as in infrastructure projects.

He has held high-level positions in various financial entities. He served as deputy treasurer of the Federal Government, where he was in charge of the country's financial programming and modernized tax collection processes by introducing digital media and implementing more efficient revenue collection schemes. He was representative of the Federal Treasury at the Latin American Treasury Forum. As director general of Mexico City's Financial Administration Office, in addition to being in charge of debt management, he implemented the first issuance of a green bond for a subnational government in Latin America, which was used to finance energy saving and energy-efficiency projects, optimize drinking water supply and quality, and sustainable public transportation. He also coordinated the placement of government securities' certificates for the same entity and collaborated in financial viability projects, socioeconomic assessment, and in the technical and financial analysis of actions aimed at developing social satisfiers.

He has written articles on monetary policy, public finance and financial inclusion.

From March 2021 up to his appointment as member of the central bank's Governing Board, he worked as a technical researcher for said Board, where he prepared, analyzed and authorized various reports and publications, which are submitted to the Governing Board during monetary policy decisions, as well as in cases where Banco de México acts as a financial and banking authority. He has analyzed and prepared reports on national and international economic and financial issues, risk scenarios on Mexico's economic situation through the study of economic and financial variables and relevant issues such as commercial banking, credit, and matters related to payment systems and the country's financial and banking system, as well as a timely follow-up of foreign exchange and securities markets and issuance of banknotes and coins.

On January 18, 2023 he was appointed by Mexico's President and ratified by the Congress' Permanent Commission as a member of Banco de México's Governing Board for the period from January 18, 2023 to December 30, 2030.
